TO ALL PARTIES AND THEIR ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on November 19, 2020 at 10:00 a.m., or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard via videoconference hearing hosted by the above-entitled Court, located at 450 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94102, Defendant Menzies Aviation, Inc. (“Menzies”) will and hereby does move this Court for an order granting summary judgment as to all causes of action alleged in Plaintiff Renaldo Navarro’s Complaint, or in the alternative, partial summary judgment. This Motion is made upon the grounds that:

1. Plaintiff’s first cause of action alleging race and national origin discrimination fails because Plaintiff cannot state a prima facie claim of discrimination based on anything other than speculation, he cannot create a genuine issue of material fact with respect to Menzies’ honest and good-faith belief that Plaintiff engaged in misconduct amounting to harassment of subordinate employees, and he cannot carry his burden to show by substantial evidence that Menzies’ articulated reasons were pretext for unlawful discrimination;

2. Plaintiff’s second cause of action alleging retaliation fails because he cannot state a prima facie claim of retaliation where his alleged protected activity was in fact illegal activity under federal labor law, he cannot create a genuine issue of material fact with respect to Menzies’ honest and good-faith belief that he engaged in misconduct, and he cannot carry his burden to show by substantial evidence that Menzies’ articulated reasons were pretext for unlawful retaliation;

3. Plaintiff’s third cause of action alleging wrongful termination in violation of public policy fails because the claim is duplicative and derivative of his statutory discrimination and retaliation causes of action, such that the failure of the first two causes of action renders his wrongful termination in violation of public policy claim deficient as a matter of law; and

4. Plaintiff’s fourth cause of action alleging intentional infliction of emotional distress fails because he alleges nothing more than garden variety employment termination claims which fall within the preemptive sweep of California’s Workers’ Compensation Act.

This Motion is based upon this Notice, the attached Memorandum of Points and Authorities, Menzies’ Appendix of Supporting Evidence and the exhibits thereto, the records and pleadings on file herein, all of which the Court is requested to take judicial notice thereof, and upon such oral or

1 documentary evidence as may be presented at the time of hearing thereon.

1 ISSUES TO BE DECIDED PER CIVIL LOCAL RULE 7-4(a)(3)

2 1. Can Plaintiff Renaldo Navarro state a prima facie claim of race and/or national origin 3 discrimination where he has admitted he has no tangible evidence that any unlawful motive attended the 4 challenged actions of Menzies Aviation and he can only speculate that his race or national origin must 5 have played some role in those actions?

6 2. Can Plaintiff survive summary judgment on his national origin and discrimination claims
7 when he cannot create a genuine issue of material fact as to whether Menzies received information 8 supporting an honest and good-faith belief that he abused his authority as a supervisor and therefore 9 harassed subordinate employees?

10 3. Can Plaintiff survive summary judgment on his national origin and discrimination claims 11 by carrying his burden to establish, through substantial evidence, pretext when he admits he has no
12 tangible evidence that Menzies' stated reasons for its actions were pretext for a discriminatory motive 13 and he cannot advance a similarly situated comparison of circumstances supporting a non-speculative 14 assertion of pretext?

15 4. Can Plaintiff satisfy his obligation to state a prima facie claim of retaliation where the 16 activity he claims was protected was in fact a violation of federal labor law and therefore does not 17 constitute protected activity?

18 5. Can Plaintiff survive summary judgment on his retaliation claim when he cannot create a 19 genuine issue of material fact as to whether Menzies received information supporting an honest and 20 good-faith belief that he abused his authority as a supervisor and therefore harassed subordinate 21 employees?

22 6. Can Plaintiff survive summary judgment on his retaliation claim by carrying his burden 23 to establish, through substantial evidence, pretext when he admits he has no tangible evidence that 24 Menzies' stated reasons for its actions were pretext for a retaliatory motive and he cannot advance a 25 similarly situated comparison of circumstances supporting a non-speculative assertion of pretext?

26 7. Can Plaintiff maintain a valid claim of wrongful termination in violation of public policy 27 where such claim is derivative and duplicative of his statutory discrimination and retaliation claims such 28 that the failure of those statutory claims renders his wrongful termination claim legally deficient?

1 8. Can Plaintiff maintain a valid claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress when 2 his allegations only amount to the type of garden variety termination-of-employment circumstances that 3 fall within the preemptive sweep of the California Workers' Compensation Act?

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I. INTRODUCTION

In August 2018, Menzies Aviation received a complaint from the union representing a group of employees that someone was pressuring those unionized workers to sign a petition complaining about a supervisor's manner of running the operation. Soon thereafter, this complaint grew into information coming from multiple sources that Plaintiff Renaldo Navarro – himself a supervisor and therefore a member of Menzies management – had pressured employees to sign the petition, a conclusion validated by testimony under oath given by Plaintiff's former subordinates. Based on this information, Menzies reasonably and in good faith concluded Plaintiff had abused his authority and therefore harassed employees and decided to terminate his employment. Because Plaintiff cannot genuinely dispute any of the material facts regarding the information provided to Menzies, none of his claims can survive.

Plaintiff's denials of the misconduct attributed to him and reported to Menzies by multiple sources is of no import, because he cannot and does not dispute Menzies received such information. Unable to dispute the bases for Menzies' good-faith conclusions, Plaintiff's opposition efforts will likely devolve into flailing efforts to compare how Menzies handled the complaints about him to information regarding purely operational concerns raised against another supervisor. But those two circumstances are not remotely similar in character, and absent any valid, non-speculative evidence – which Plaintiff admits he does not have – he can neither sustain prima facie claims of discrimination, retaliation or wrongful termination nor can he show Menzies' stated reasons for its actions were pretext. Plaintiff further offers nothing more than standard employment-related facts that do not fall outside the preemptive scope of the California Workers' Compensation Act allowing him to maintain a cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 56 then, Menzies is entitled to and requests the Court enter summary judgment in its favor as to all causes of action.

II. FACTUAL SUMMARY

A. Plaintiff Understood The Importance Of Supervisors Following Company Policy And Supporting Other Leadership By Not Undermining Their Authority

In September 2005, Plaintiff began working for Aircraft Service International, Inc. ("ASIG") as a

1 Fueler at San Francisco International Airport (“SFO”). [Exhibit 12, 23:15-25.¹] A local of the Service
 2 Employees International Union (the “Union”) represents these SFO Fuelers, and therefore represented 3 Plaintiff until he became a supervisor. [Exhibit 1, ¶ 2.] At the time, BBA Aviation owned ASIG, and 4 during BBA’s ownership, ASIG promoted Plaintiff to Fueling Supervisor, giving him additional 5 responsibilities that included working effectively with Fuelers and managing their workload. [Exhibit 1, 6 ¶ 2; Exhibit 12, 25:17-26:10, 27:19-25.] The Supervisor duties also included basic shift oversight of a 7 part of the fueling operation, assigning Fuelers to service flights and when take their breaks, and 8 “maintaining harmony among coworkers and resolving grievances.” [Exhibit 18; Exhibit 13, 12:9-14, 9 16:25-17:11, 19:9-13; Exhibit 17, 13:22-15:1, 17:16-19:22.]

10 As a supervisor, Plaintiff understood he held a leadership and management role. [Exhibit 12, 11 28:1-6.] He also affirms that as a supervisor, it was important to: (i) be honest in his communications; 12 (ii) follow and reinforce company policies; (iii) set a positive example for non-supervisors; (iv) support 13 other members of management before rank-and-file employees; (v) work effectively with other 14 supervisors and not undermine their authority; (vi) avoid involving rank-and-file employees in his 15 personal grievances or pressuring them to get involved in disputes; (vii) explain documents before 16 asking employees to sign such materials; and (viii) take responsibility for his errors and mistakes.
 17 [Exhibit 12, 28:23-33:1, 34:2-4.]

18 B. After Menzies Acquired ASIG, Plaintiff Became Subject To Menzies’ Conduct
 19 Policies Prohibiting Harassment And Intimidation Of Others

20 On February 1, 2017, Menzies acquired the ASIG business and all ASIG employees became part 21 of the Menzies enterprise. [Exhibit 1, ¶ 2; Exhibit 12, 23:15-25, 24:17-22, 25:17-19, Exhibit 15, 7:4-22 15.] In connection with this change, ASIG employees – including Plaintiff – became subject to Menzies 23 policies and conduct standards. [Exhibit 1, ¶ 4; Exhibit 15, 11:18-12:20, 15:23-16:10.] As stated in the 24 Employee Handbook, these expectations included prohibitions against “the use of abusive, malicious, 25 and/or threatening … conduct toward any coworker … that causes or tends to cause a threatening, hostile or intimidating work environment.” [Exhibit 19.] In a separate Code of Conduct document, Menzies also explains that “We all have a right to work free from intimidation and harassment and in an environment where we feel safe and comfortable.” [Exhibit 20.] It further states that “We expect all employees to treat each other with courtesy, dignity and respect.” [Id.]

C. After Promoting Andrew Dodge, Menzies Coached Him On Operational Improvements In Response To Complaints By Plaintiff

In February 2016, ASIG hired Andrew Dodge as a Fueler. [Exhibit 17, 12:19-13: 9.] Dodge describes himself as “a Class A Fueler” who earned a promotion to supervisor about a year later. [Exhibit 17, 13:2-12, 38:13-39:1.] However, after becoming supervisor, Dodge had growth opportunities that resulted in him fielding questions about when Fuelers would receive breaks. [Exhibit 17, 39:2-14.] And while some Fuelers had concerns with Dodge’s operations-management abilities, the only complaints Menzies received about Dodge came either from Plaintiff, with pictures of Dodge purportedly asleep on the job, or merely relating to Fuelers missing meal and rest breaks. [Exhibit 8, ¶¶ 2-4; Exhibit 9, ¶¶ 2-4; Exhibit 13, 24:20-25:25; Exhibit 14, 42:17-43:2, 54:15-25, Exhibit 15, 38:18-39:9; Exhibit 16, 31:12-16, 73:16-74:14.]

Menzies took action in response, which included Dodge managers’ speaking to him about these concerns, performing quality assurance checks, and giving Dodge guidance and direction on how to improve his performance. [Exhibit 13, 25:23-25; Exhibit 14, 51:2-52:17; Exhibit 15, 40:11-25; Exhibit 16, 27:13-28:3, 37:17-38:9, 38:22-39:8; Exhibit 17, 21:11-19, 32:14-33:3, 48:3-20, 49:1-7.] As for Plaintiff’s allegations about sleeping on the job, Dodge disclosed to Menzies that he suffers from sleep apnea and often napped after his shift before driving home. [Exhibit 13, 26:16-19; Exhibit 14, 43:23-44:2; Exhibit 17, 20:20-25, 21:11-19, 23:15-21.] Menzies also confirmed that the pictures of Dodge sleeping occurred during off-hours in non-working areas, such that there was no behavioral concern for the instances about which Plaintiff had complained.² [Exhibit 14, 44:22-45:23; Exhibit 15, 50:20-52:19; Exhibit 16, 28:24-29:11, 29:25-30:9; Exhibit 17, 26:20-27:15.] However, none of the complaints or other information Menzies received about Dodge included allegations of harassment or mistreatment by

² If anything, Menzies had an obligation to reasonably accommodate Dodge, and because there was no issue with his sleeping during off-hours, Menzies’ handling of Plaintiff’s complaints about Dodge’s disability was completely appropriate.

1 Dodge of the Fuelers; rather, they all pertained to operational issues only. [Exhibit 5, ¶ 8; Exhibit 8, ¶¶
 2 2-4; Exhibit 9, ¶¶ 2-4; Exhibit 11, ¶¶ 3-6; Exhibit 14, 54:4-21; Exhibit 17, 50:25-51:17.]

3 D. Plaintiff Butted Heads With Dodge About Operational Issues, Resulting In The 4 Union Complaining That Someone Was Pressuring Fuelers To Sign A Petition

5 Dodge frequently worked the afternoon “swing” shift before handing off to Plaintiff, who 6 typically worked the graveyard shift. [Exhibit 12, 43:4-13; Exhibit 17, 5:2-4, 13:22-15:1, 28:1-18.]
 7 Dodge also sometimes worked the graveyard shift to cover days off or call offs. [Exhibit 17, 28:1-18.]

8 For his part, Dodge described Plaintiff as “a great supervisor.” [Exhibit 17, 28: 19-23.]

9 However, Plaintiff felt Dodge was “doing bad things to him” and against other fuelers and complained 10 to Menzies, though such complaints occurred long before the relevant timeframe here. [Exhibit 12, 11 46:16-47:11; 49:15-18; 51:9-17; 28:24-29:15, 30:8-19, 31:21-32:13.] A supervisor colleague who 12 witnessed the friction between the two thought that while both Dodge and Plaintiff behaved childishly in 13 their conflicts, Plaintiff “had it out for Dodge and was regularly taking actions that undermined Dodge.”
 14 [Exhibit 4, ¶ 6.] Plaintiff admits telling Dodge he was doing a poor job apportioning work, providing 15 Fuelers breaks, and was causing delays. [Exhibit 12, 67:12-17, 68:7-69:4.]

16 Menzies first learned of a petition circulating about Dodge when the Union informed Human 17 Resources Manager Tracy Aguilera that Fuelers were complaining about being forced to sign a petition.
 18 [Exhibit 15, 23:24-24:10, Exhibit 16, 11:19-12:3, 13:22-14:6, 15:12-22.] Fuelers were also reporting
 19 directly to Dodge that Plaintiff was pressuring them to sign a petition complaining about him. [Exhibit 20 17, 39:15-40:5, 44:17-45:2, 46:12-47:6.]

21 E. After Dodge Complained About Plaintiff’s Actions Toward Him, Menzies
 22 Suspended Plaintiff To Allow For An Investigation Into The Situation

23 On August 16, 2018, Dodge reported to his managers what Fuelers were sharing regarding being 24 forced to sign a petition by Plaintiff. [Exhibit 17, 41:14-20.] To commence an investigation, his 25 managers asked Dodge to summarize his concerns in writing, which Dodge did in his own words 26 detailing how he felt Plaintiff was mistreating him. [Exhibit 21; Exhibit 17, 42:18-23, 44:17-45:2, 27 45:10-21.] Dodge included with his written submission a screen shot of a text message Plaintiff admits 28 authoring appearing to threaten Dodge with a petition. [Exhibit 21; Exhibit 12, 56:22-25, 69:25-70:8.]

1 At the time Dodge made this complaint to Menzies, Plaintiff had not yet provided the actual petition to 2 Menzies but later did. [Exhibit 12, 71:4-21.] That petition complained about the way Dodge ran the 3 operation, contending “the people” were not taking breaks because of the way Dodge sets up flights and 4 that Dodge blamed “the people” for flight delays. [Exhibit 22.] Plaintiff had signed that petition.
 5 [Exhibit 22; Exhibit 12, 46:6-7, 52:23-25.]

6 Menzies commenced an investigation into the entire scenario surrounding the petition, including 7 what Dodge had reported about Fuelers being pressured by Plaintiff to sign it. [Exhibit 15, 24:25-25:17, 8 28:7-10.] In connection with that investigation, Duty Manager John Qually informed Plaintiff on 9 August 23, 2018 that Menzies was suspending him and attempted to deliver a document memorializing
 10 the suspension, which Plaintiff refused to sign. [Exhibit 23; Exhibit 14, 40:1-15, 47:19-48:10.] Plaintiff 11 claims the only reason provided for his suspension was that it was inappropriate for him as a member of 12 management to sign a petition against another member of management. [Exhibit 12, 77:1-8.]

13 Following that interaction, Qually submitted to Menzies a written statement reporting what he 14 described to have happened during that conversation. [Exhibit 23; Exhibit 14, 46:17-48:10, 48:23-49:8.]
 15 In that statement, Qually reported that Plaintiff had said that “As far as the petition he said that all the 16 guys that signed it are all adults and can read what it’s all about before signing it and making it sound 17 like they did so of their own free will.” [Exhibit 23.] Qually also reported that Plaintiff said he hoped 18 Menzies would terminate him “so he can go to his Lawyer and file a suit against the company for being 19 biased or harassment and get 2 years pay like he did with Swissport.”³ [Id.]

20 F. Menzies’ Investigation Generated Multiple Sources Of Information Supporting The Conclusion That Plaintiff Pressured Fuelers To Sign The Petition

21 After receiving Dodge’s complaint and the petition from Plaintiff, Menzies’ SFO Director of 22 Operations Raul Vargas directed Safety Supervisor Kevin Blumberg to investigate all the circumstances 23 surrounding the petition and Dodge’s report. [Exhibit 16, 14:9-15:11, 16:5-9, 17:12-18, 59:8-21.] As 24 part of his investigation, Blumberg instructed Plaintiff to submit a statement explaining his side of the

26
 27 ³ Plaintiff made legal claims against a previous employer (and Menzies competitor) called Swissport.
 28 [Exhibit 12, 14:4-9, 15:5-12.] From that experience, Plaintiff testified that he believes bringing legal claims against an employer following termination makes it likely that he will extract a settlement, including in this case with respect to Menzies. [Exhibit 12, 16:14-19, 17:3-7.]

1 story, which Plaintiff did. [Exhibit 24; Exhibit 12, 85:12-86:8, 97:20-22, 98:8-10.] Nowhere in that 2 statement did Plaintiff contend Dodge harassed other Fuelers; rather, it referred to the same pictures
 3 Menzies had determined did not show Dodge sleeping on the job. [Exhibit 24.] The statement provided 4 by Plaintiff also said “I’m just wondering why you suspended me because of helping the people.⁴ [Id.]

5 During the investigation, three employees provided written statements to Menzies describing 6 pressure to sign the petition, with one such petition specifically identifying Plaintiff as the perpetrator.
 7 [Exhibit 25; Exhibit 15, 25:18-23; Exhibit 16, 17:12-22, 21:8-22:10, 52:22-53:21.] Another supervisor
 8 also reported that Plaintiff asked him to sign the petition and specifically told Menzies he felt pressured 9 to do so.⁵ [Exhibit 4, ¶¶ 3-5, 7; Exhibit 16, 57:21-59:5.] Plaintiff admits he has no factual basis to 10 dispute whether any of this information was provided to Menzies. [Exhibit 12, 65:17-24.] In addition, 11 multiple Fuelers confirm under oath that they felt either pressured or misled by Plaintiff to sign the 12 petition, including two individuals who state that Plaintiff approached them multiple times after they 13 refused to sign and they witnessed Plaintiff doing the same to other Fuelers. [Exhibit 5, ¶¶ 3-5; Exhibit 14 7, ¶¶ 3-7; Exhibit 6, ¶¶ 3-6; Exhibit 10, ¶¶ 2-5; Exhibit 14, 25:18-23; Exhibit 16, 52:22-53:21.] Still 15 other Fuelers testify that Plaintiff gave them a signature page to execute without explaining its purpose, 16 adding they would not have signed it had they known it related to a petition against Dodge. [Exhibit 6, 17 ¶¶ 3-5; Exhibit 10, ¶¶ 2-5; Exhibit 14, 25:18-23; Exhibit 16, 52:22-53:21.]

18 G. Menzies Terminated Plaintiff Based On The Information Provided For The Sole 19 Reason That It Cannot Allow Management To Harass Subordinate Employees

20 As Menzies’ investigation was developing this information, Aguilera initially recommended 21 against termination of Plaintiff. [Exhibit 16, 33:24-34:4, 56:6-16.] However, in emails both Blumberg 22 and Vargas challenged that recommendation, with Vargas feeling anything short of termination was not 23 proper because of what he viewed as the severity of the conduct involved. [Exhibit 15, 33:17-35:15;
 24 Exhibit 16, 52:1-8, 63:18-64:4.] After they discussed the full scope of the situation and the investigation

26 ⁴ While Plaintiff denies authoring the petition, its repeated curious use of “the people” and Plaintiff’s 27 later statement admitting he believed he was helping “the people” could certainly support the inference 28 that Plaintiff played some role in the petition’s preparation. [Compare Exhibit 22 and Exhibit 24.]

5 That same supervisor never requested any other employees sign the petition because in his capacity as a supervisor, he believed it would be inappropriate to do so. [Exhibit 4, ¶ 4.]

1 findings, Aguilera's opinion changed and she agreed termination was appropriate. [Exhibit 15, 33:17-2 35:15; Exhibit 16, 52:1-8, 71:10-16, 71:24-73:4.] Vargas, as the decision-maker, then instructed 3 Aguilera to proceed with Plaintiff's termination. [Exhibit 26.]

4 The sole reason for Vargas's decision was his belief that Plaintiff harassed Fuelers by pressuring
 5 at least some of them to sign the petition against Dodge. [Exhibit 26, Exhibit 15, 17:13-18:2, Exhibit 6 16, 19:8-16, 22:20-23:3, 23:15-24:5.] Though some signed voluntarily, Vargas felt even one situation of 7 a supervisor pressuring rank-and-file employees to be inappropriate, necessitating termination as a 8 corrective measure. [Exhibit 16, 34:18-35:15, 52:22-53:19, 56:22-57:9, 60:23-61:14, 64:17-65:15.] 9 Vargas captured this reasoning clearly in writing, stating that because Menzies had concluded that 10 Plaintiff "as a member of the management team, was soliciting signatures and intimidating Employees 11 to sign a petition ... We cannot allow our management team to harass our people in any way." [Exhibit 12 26.] Aguilera then informed Plaintiff of the decision. [Exhibit 12, 87:2-88:4.] Plaintiff claims the 13 reason she provided is that as a member of management, he should not have signed a petition against 14 another manager. [Exhibit 12, 88:15-23.] Plaintiff admits both that no other reason was given to him, 15 and that he has no tangible evidence – only speculation – that either his race or national origin played 16 any role in the suspension and termination decisions. [Exhibit 12, 88:24-93:23, 94:7-95:7.]

17 H. Further Petitions Parroted Plaintiff's Petition Already Investigated By Menzies, 18 With Fuelers Continuing To Disclaim Mistreatment By Dodge

19 At some point after Plaintiff's termination, Menzies received a second petition regarding Dodge 20 that repeated the claims of the previous petition investigated by Menzies and resulting in Plaintiff's 21 termination. [Exhibit 27.] As with the first petition, the specific allegations focused on operational 22 issues such as delays and missed breaks and contained no allegation of actual harassment by Dodge.⁶ 23 [Compare Exhibit 22 and Exhibit 27.] Thereafter, Union shop steward Rafael Vargas appears to have 24 prepared a letter noting the previous submission of two petitions involving Dodge, although Menzies has 25 no copy of that letter in any of its own files. [Exhibit 1, ¶ 7; Exhibit 28.] It was this letter – lacking any 26 signatory support or indicia of personal knowledge – that first articulated "harassment" by Dodge, even 27

28 ⁶ As with the first petition and Plaintiff's statement following his suspension, the second petition repeatedly referred to "the people" as the purported victims of Dodge's shortcomings. [Exhibit 24.]

1 as it focused on delays and missed breaks. [Exhibit 28.] Vasquez also worked on a different part of the 2 operation from Dodge, raising questions about his personal knowledge. [Exhibit 17, 40:20-41:6.]

3 While Plaintiff admits this second petition and Vasquez's letter occurred after his termination 4 (such that one could question how he would have such material in his possession), he produced to 5 Menzies these materials and copies of his text messages containing the language of Vasquez's letter, 6 suggesting some continued involvement by Plaintiff in a campaign against Dodge.⁷ [Exhibits 28 and 29; 7 Exhibit 12, 102:20-103:6.] Additionally, both the second petition and Vasquez's letter pertain to the 8 same complaints addressed in the first petition which Menzies had already investigated. [Exhibits 27 9 and 28; Exhibit 15, 42:13-43:2.] And as noted, multiple Fuelers – including those who wanted to sign 10 the petition out of concern for operational problems – disclaim any contention that Dodge engaged in 11 any of the type of harassing, intimidating or other similar behavior that prompted Vargas to terminate 12 Plaintiff's employment. [Exhibit 5, ¶ 8; Exhibit 8, ¶¶ 2-4; Exhibit 9, ¶¶ 2-4; Exhibit 11, ¶¶ 3-6.]

13 III. BECAUSE PLAINTIFF CANNOT CREATE A DISPUTE OF MATERIAL FACT NOR 14 SATISFY HIS EVIDENTIARY BURDENS, MENZIES IS ENTITLED TO SUMMARY
 15 JUDGMENT ON EACH OF PLAINTIFF'S CAUSES OF ACTIONS

16 Fed. R. Civ. P. 56 authorizes courts to enter partial summary judgment as to whole causes of 17 action or claims within a cause of action when doing so will isolate and dispose of invalid claims. Fed.
 18 R. Civ. P. 56(a). Rule 56 entitles a moving party to summary judgment when the undisputed material 19 facts show that there is no legal merit to a plaintiff's claim or he cannot support a valid claim. Celotex 20 Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323-24 (1986). Once a moving party shows it can meet this burden, the 21 opposing party can only withstand summary judgment by going beyond its own pleadings and affidavits 22 and identifying either specific legitimately disputed facts or legal bases creating a genuine issue for trial.
 23 Id. at 324; Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 252 (1986).

24 Plaintiff's Complaint advances four causes of action alleging (i) race and national origin 25 discrimination, (ii) retaliation, (iii) wrongful termination in violation of public policy, and (iv)

26
 27 ⁷ Menzies only learned about these documents when it obtained copies from Plaintiff's production made 28 with his Rule 26(a) Initial Disclosures. [Exhibit 1, ¶ 7; Exhibit 2, ¶ 7.] When asked how Plaintiff had possession of materials not in Menzies' file, Plaintiff responded that "the people" gave the documents to him. [Exhibit 12, 101:23-102:7.]

1 intentional infliction of emotional distress (“IIED”). As to the first three causes of action, all analyzed
 2 under the McDonnell-Douglas burden shifting approach, the Court should enter summary judgment
 3 because Plaintiff cannot set forth valid prima facie claims, and even if he could, his self-serving 4 speculation as to Menzies’ motives for its actions do not qualify as substantial evidence of pretext 5 necessary to create a dispute of material fact. And as for his IIED cause of action, Plaintiff has 6 advanced nothing more than a garden variety claim challenging the termination of his employment 7 which falls within the preemptive sweep of the California Workers’ Compensation Act. Menzies is 8 therefore entitled to summary judgment on each and every cause of action advanced by Plaintiff.

9 A. Plaintiff’s First Cause Of Action Alleging Race And National Origin Discrimination
 10 Fails Because He Cannot State A Prima Facie Case Nor Meet His Pretext Burden

11 To assert a prima facie case of race or national origin discrimination, amongst other things 12 Plaintiff must offer some valid indication that he was performing his job satisfactorily and some other 13 circumstance suggests discriminatory motive. See Kodwavi v. Intercontinental Hotels Grp. Res., Inc., 14 966 F. Supp. 2d 971, 983 (N.D. Cal. 2013); Guz v. Bechtel Nat'l, Inc., 24 Cal. 4th 317, 379 (2000);
 15 Nealy v. City of Santa Monica, 234 Cal. App. 4th 359, 380 (2015). Only if he can do so, Menzies then 16 has a minimal burden to articulate a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the challenged adverse 17 employment action. Aragon v. Republic Silver State Disposal, 292 F.3d 654, 658 (9th Cir. 2002).
 18 Meeting this burden does not require Menzies to prove Plaintiff engaged in misconduct, merely 19 demonstrate that it had a good-faith basis for reaching the conclusions and taking the actions it did. See 20 Incalza v. Fendi N. Am., Inc., 479 F.3d 1005, 1013 (9th Cir. 2007) (“Under California law, 21 an employer has good cause to terminate an employee if it has ‘fair and honest reasons, regulated 22 by good faith on the part of the employer, that are not trivial, arbitrary or capricious, unrelated to 23 business needs or goals, or pretextual’”) (quoting Cotran v. Rollins Hudig Hall Int'l, Inc., 17 Cal. 4th 93 24 (1998); Villiarimo v. Aloha Island Air, Inc., 281 F.3d 1054, 1063 (9th Cir. 2002) (noting that courts only 25 require an employer honestly believed its reasons for its actions, even if its reason is foolish or trivial)).

26 Once Menzies articulates a legitimate reason for its actions, Plaintiff can only survive summary 27 judgment by coming forward with substantial evidence that its legitimate reasons were a pretext for 28 unlawful discrimination. Aragon, 292 F.3d at 658-59; Horn v. Cushman & Wakefield W., Inc., 72 Cal.

1 App. 4th 798, 806-07 (1999). Mere speculation does not satisfy this burden, and if Plaintiff can only 2 provide speculation, rather than substantial evidence of pretext, his claim must end in summary
 3 judgment. Cucuzza v. City of Santa Clara, 104 Cal. App. 4th 1031, 1038 (2002) (a showing that only 4 gives rise to speculation or unreasonable inferences about the employer's motivation does not create a 5 triable issue); Morgan v. Regents of Univ. of Cal., 88 Cal. App. 4th 52, 77 (2001) (speculative evidence 6 "does not rise to the level of the substantial evidence of pretext required to avoid summary judgment").

7 Under this analytical approach, even if Plaintiff could meet his prima facie burdens – which he 8 cannot – Menzies had an honest and good faith belief that Plaintiff engaged in significant misconduct 9 which supported its decisions to suspend him for investigation and then terminate his employment. And 10 having admitted he has no evidence of unlawful motive and can only speculate as to why Menzies took 11 such actions, Plaintiff cannot satisfy his substantial evidence burden to show pretext. The Court should 12 therefore enter summary judgment in favor of Menzies on Plaintiff's discrimination cause of action.

13 1. Plaintiff's Mere Belief Of Possible Discrimination Does Not Satisfy His Prima
 14 Facie Burden And Menzies Had Honest, Good-Faith Reasons For Its Actions

15 Plaintiff's discrimination cause of action blending race and national origin theories does not even 16 get off the ground because he admits he has no evidence to support a theory that some circumstance 17 suggests discriminatory motive. See Guz, 24 Cal. 4th at 379 (2000); Nealy, 234 Cal. App. 4th at 380.
 18 Rather, his testimony makes plain Plaintiff is simply speculating that his race and national origin played 19 any factor in his suspension and subsequent termination. [Exhibit 12, 88:24-93:23, 94:7-95:7.]
 20 Plaintiff's self-serving beliefs are simply not "circumstances suggesting discriminatory motive."

21 However, even if Plaintiff's rank speculation excused him from satisfying his prima facie
 22 burden, Menzies had legitimate reasons for its decisions to suspend and then terminate Plaintiff.
 23 Menzies received information from multiple sources indicating Plaintiff's subordinates felt either 24 pressured or misled by Plaintiff to sign a petition against Dodge. [Exhibit 21; Exhibit 25; Exhibit 12,
 25 56:22-25, 69:25-70:8; Exhibit 15, 23:24-24:10, 25:18-23; Exhibit 16, 11:19-12:3, 13:22-14:6, 15:12-22, 26 17:12-22, 21:8-22:10, 52:22-53:21; Exhibit 17, 39:15-40:5, 41:14-20, 44:17-45:2, 46:12-47:6.] Multiple 27 other Fuelers additionally testify under oath that Plaintiff engaged in such conduct directly toward them
 28 and/or that they witnessed him doing the same toward others. [Exhibit 5, ¶¶ 3-5; Exhibit 7, ¶¶ 3-7;

1 Exhibit 6, ¶¶ 3-6; Exhibit 10, ¶¶ 2-5; Exhibit 14, 25:18-23; Exhibit 16, 52:22-53:21.] It is of no moment
 2 – and therefore not a material dispute – that Plaintiff denies engaging in such conduct, because the 3 critical question is whether the multiple sources of evidence provided (which Plaintiff cannot deny 4 Menzies received) support an honest belief that Plaintiff abused his authority and therefore harassed 5 others. Kodwavi, 966 F. Supp. 2d at 984 (“Plaintiff’s arguments focus on whether or not he actually 6 threatened or assaulted LoGrasso, but the truth of that matter is not relevant to whether the Hotel had a 7 legitimate, non-discriminatory basis for terminating him. Instead, the key inquiry is whether the Hotel 8 had a good faith belief in the basis for the action it took”); Collier v. Windsor Fire Prot. Dist. Bd. of 9 Dirs., No. C 08-2582 PJH, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 115649, at *33 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 6, 2011) (“[T]he court 10 need not determine whether plaintiff actually committed the misconduct that led to his dismissal, but 11 only whether the factual basis on which defendants concluded that a dischargeable act had been 12 committed was reached honestly”). And unlike in many employment discrimination cases, Menzies’
 13 reason for Plaintiff’s termination is clearly articulated in an objective writing in the form of Vargas’s
 14 email stating “We cannot allow our management team to harass our people in any way.” [Exhibit 26.]
 15 In fact, even Plaintiff essentially concedes the information provided to Menzies supports a good-faith 16 termination decision, having admitted that as a supervisor Menzies reasonably expected him to it 17 support other members of management before rank-and-file employees, avoid undermining their 18 authority, not involve employees in disputes with others, and explain to employees documents they were 19 being asked to sign. [Exhibit 12, 28:23-33:1, 34:2-4.] Such facts, which Plaintiff cannot legitimately 20 dispute, more than demonstrate Menzies’ honest belief that Plaintiff had harassed Fuelers and abused his 21 authority and good-faith reasons for the actions it took.

22 2. Plaintiff’s Reliance On Mere Speculation Cannot And Does Not Create A 23 Genuine Dispute That Survives Summary Judgment

24 With Menzies having articulated legitimate reasons for its actions, Plaintiff must now show such 25 reasons were pretext for discrimination and go beyond mere speculation to do so. Aragon, 292 F.3d at 26 658-59. Having conceded he has no such tangible evidence and his entire claims of discrimination rest 27 on his self-serving speculation [Exhibit 12, 88:24-93:23, 94:7-95:7], Plaintiff is already in a woeful
 28 position to carry this substantial evidence burden. At best, Plaintiff is likely to argue pretext exists

1 because Menzies supposedly took disparate action with respect to purported complaints of harassment 2 against Dodge compared to how Menzies addressed the various behaviors by Plaintiff reported to it.
 3 The problem with this argument is that Menzies had information clearly complaining about Plaintiff 4 pressuring and misleading employees to sign a petition, amounting to a harassing abuse of authority, 5 whereas the information supplied about Dodge related to operational concerns only. Indeed, to this day, 6 Fuelers who wanted to and voluntarily signed the petition disclaim any harassing behavior by Dodge, 7 and neither the first nor second petition complaining about his actions toward “the people” make any 8 specific or even general allegations of harassment. [Compare Exhibit 22 and Exhibit 27.]

9 To say both circumstances involve complaints of harassment which Menzies handled disparately 10 is a sleight-of-hand facile argument. In fact, the only place an allegation of harassment against Dodge 11 even superficially occurs is the purported Rafael Vasquez November 18, 2018 letter – seemingly 12 authored long after Plaintiff’s termination – which Plaintiff produced and Menzies never received 13 detailing the same operational issues from earlier petitions that Menzies had already investigated.
 14 [Exhibit 1, ¶ 7; Exhibit 2, ¶ 7 Exhibit 28.] Indeed, even Dodge acknowledges that Menzies looked into 15 such complaints and gave him direction on how to improve, showing that Menzies took the concerns 16 expressed about Fuelers and scheduling and did address them appropriately with Dodge. [Exhibit 13, 17 25:23-25; Exhibit 14, 51:2-52:17; Exhibit 15, 40:11-25; Exhibit 16, 27:13-28:3, 37:17-38:9, 38:22-39:8;
 18 Exhibit 17, 21:11-19, 32:14-33:3, 48:3-20, 49:1-7.] These same Fuelers explicitly deny both that Dodge 19 engaged in any harassing conduct and that they were complaining about any such purported harassment
 20 instead of purely operational issues. [Exhibit 5, ¶ 8; Exhibit 8, ¶¶ 2-4; Exhibit 9, ¶¶ 2-4; Exhibit 11, ¶¶ 21 3-6.] For Plaintiff to thus argue his conduct and the purported complaints about Dodge support some 22 kind of apples-to-apples, substantial evidence-based comparison calling into question the good-faith
 23 basis of Menzies’ actions is just as speculative an exercise as Plaintiff’s testimony that he has no 24 evidence of discrimination, he merely thinks that must be what happened. [Exhibit 12, 88:24-93:23, 25 94:7-95:7.] Such self-serving arguments do not create genuine disputes of material fact as to the reasons 26 for Menzies’ action, and Menzies is therefore entitled to summary judgment.

1 B. Plaintiff Can Neither State A Prima Facie Claim Of Retaliation Because He 2 Engaged In No Protected Activity Nor Meet His Pretext Burden

3 Plaintiff's retaliation claim requires the same McDonnell-Douglas three-part burden shifting
 4 analysis employed to analyze his discrimination allegations. Nilsson v. City of Mesa, 503 F.3d 947, 954
 5 (9th Cir. 2007). Accordingly, to establish such a claim, Plaintiff must show: (1) he engaged in a 6 protected activity; and (2) a causal link existed between the protected activity and the adverse 7 employment action. Id. If he can do so, the same follow-up analysis applies in that after Menzies 8 articulates a legitimate, non-retaliatory reason for its action, Plaintiff must overcome the legitimacy of 9 such reasons with substantial, non-speculative evidence of pretext. Id. As with his discrimination 10 theories, Plaintiff can neither show a prima facie claim nor satisfy his pretext burden.

11 Plaintiff asserts that his signing of the first petition against Dodge satisfies his prima facie 12 burden to show he engaged in protected activity. But critical to this case is the fact that Fuelers at 13 Menzies are represented by the Union and Plaintiff was a non-Union member of Menzies management.
 14 [Exhibit 1, ¶ 2.] Federal labor law makes it unlawful for managers and supervisors in unionized work 15 environments to negotiate terms and conditions of employment or address employee grievances directly 16 with represented employees outside the mechanisms established by collective bargaining. See, e.g., 29 17 U.S.C. § 159; see also Castelli v. Douglas Aircraft Co., 752 F.2d 1480, 1485 (9th Cir. 1985) (noting that 18 absent authorization under a collective bargaining agreement, the federal policy of exclusive 19 representation requires the union, rather than third parties, to deal directly with employees regarding 20 grievances), and Stewart v. Leland Stanford Junior Univ., No. C 05-04131 JW, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21 20137, at *11 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 5, 2006) (noting that bypassing the collective bargaining representative 22 puts an employer at risk of violating federal labor law). Indeed, that is why the Union complained to 23 Aguilera about someone pressuring employees to sign a petition against Dodge – because doing so 24 violated its exclusive representation established by the collective bargaining relationship between 25 Menzies and the Union. [Exhibit 15, 23:24-24:10, Exhibit 16, 11:19-12:3, 13:22-14:6, 15:12-22.] In 26 this circumstance then, Plaintiff's signing of a petition involving Dodge was an unlawful labor practice 27 that put Menzies at risk of a valid grievance of direct dealing by Menzies' management. Far from 28 engaging in protected activity, Plaintiff actually engaged in illegal activity, and as a consequence, he

1 cannot rely on such actions to carry his prima facie burden.

2 Setting this fundamental flaw aside, all the same reasons why Menzies had a legitimate basis for 3 its actions and Plaintiff cannot show pretext by substantial evidence on his discrimination claims apply 4 here. As Vargas asserted both in his contemporaneous email instruction to Aguilera and through his 5 deposition testimony, the sole reason he directed the termination of Plaintiff was that Menzies had valid 6 information indicating he had pressured subordinate employees to sign a petition. Vargas reached that 7 conclusion on an honest, good-faith basis, and Plaintiff using his supervisory position to coerce other 8 employees is most certainly not protected activity. Moreover, Plaintiff acknowledges the only reason 9 given him for his termination was his involvement in the petition, and he has no tangible evidence to 10 suggest otherwise, such that he cannot meet his burden to show pretext. [Exhibit 12, 88:24-93:23, 94:7-11 95:7.] Much like his discrimination cause of action must end in summary judgment, Plaintiff's 12 retaliation cause of action similarly fails.

13 C. Plaintiff's Derivative And Duplicative Wrongful Termination In Violation Of Public
 14 Policy Cause Of Action Fails For The Same Reasons His Statutory Claims Fail

15 "The central assertion of a claim of wrongful termination in violation of public policy is that the 16 employer's motives for terminating the employee are so contrary to fundamental norms that the 17 termination inflicted an injury sounding in tort." Clark v. Amtrust N. Am., No. 16-cv-05561-MEJ, 2018 18 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23624, at *61 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 13, 2018) (quoting Roby v. McKesson Corp., 47 Cal.
 19 4th 686, 702 (2009)). To assess such claims, California courts apply the same McDonnell-Douglas 20 burden shifting analysis used for allegations of discrimination and retaliation. See Montoya v. Mgmt.
 21 Training Corp., No. 1:10-CV-00451-AWI-MJS, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 125520, at *14-15 (E.D. Cal.
 22 Oct. 27, 2011); Mitri v. Walgreen Co., No. 1:10-cv-538 AWI SKO, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 59433, at 23 *35 (E.D. Cal. June 3, 2011) ("When a plaintiff alleges retaliatory employment termination as a claim 24 for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, California follows the burden-shifting analysis of 25 McDonnell Douglas Corp"). Additionally, when a wrongful termination in violation of public policy 26 claim effectively derives from and depends on the same essential facts as a statutory employment 27 discrimination claim, the failure of the statutory claims renders the wrongful termination claim invalid
 28 as a matter of law. See Ramirez v. AvalonBay Cmtys., Inc., 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 130475, 2015 WL

1 5675866, at *11 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 26, 2015) (“Where no predicate violation of the law has occurred, a 2 plaintiff cannot state a claim for wrongful termination in violation of the law”).

3 Given that Plaintiff’s wrongful termination case requires the same analytical approach as his 4 failed discrimination and retaliation claims, and asserts the same allegedly wrongful behavior by 5 Menzies, the same analysis detailed above applies with equal measure and requires the same conclusion.
 6 In short, Plaintiff engaged in no activity protected by public policy – if anything, he violated federal 7 labor policy by involving himself directly in matters that are the exclusive province of the Union. And 8 Menzies certainly had valid sources of information to reach the honest conclusion that Plaintiff abused 9 his authority as a supervisor and therefore harassed Fuelers, facts Plaintiff cannot overcome with his 10 purely speculative arguments. The Court should therefore award summary judgment to Menzies on 11 Plaintiff’s wrongful termination cause of action.

12 D. Plaintiff’s Intentional Infliction Of Emotional Distress Cause Of Action Is 13 Preempted And Barred By The Workers’ Compensation Act

14 California’s Worker’s Compensation Act (“WCA”) provides in pertinent part: “Liability for the 15 compensation provided in this division, in lieu of any other liability whatsoever to any person ... shall 16 ... exist against an employer for any injury sustained by his or her employees arising out of and in the 17 course of employment.” Cal. Lab. Code § 3601 (emphasis supplied). As the California Supreme Court 18 further explained:

19 [W]hen the misconduct attributed to the employer is actions which are a 20 normal part of the employment relationship, such as demotions, promotions, 21 criticism of work practices, and frictions in negotiations as to grievances, 22 an employee suffering emotional distress causing disability may not avoid the exclusive remedy provisions of the Labor Code by characterizing the employer’s decisions as manifestly unfair, outrageous, harassment, or intended to cause emotional disturbance resulting in disability.

23 Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Prot. Dist. 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160, (1987); see also Mueller v. City. of L.A., 176 Cal.
 24 App. 4th 809, 823 (2009) (“there is no independent recovery for intentional infliction of emotional 25 distress in the employment arena because that injury comes under the exclusive remedy of workers’ 26 compensation law”). California courts have accordingly routinely recognized termination decisions and 27 investigations related to the termination occur as part of the employment relationship and are therefore 28 barred by the WCA. See, e.g., Bracke v. City. of L.A., 60 F. App’x 120, 122 (9th Cir. 2003); Abiola v.

¹ ESA Mgmt., LLC, No. 13-cv-03496-JCS, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26918, at *16 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 3, 2014); Shoemaker v. Myers, 52 Cal. 3d 1, 25 (1990).

Plaintiff's IIED claim simply re-hashes the allegations of his other three causes of action, and certainly allege nothing so extreme or shocking-to-the-conscience that allow him to avoid workers' compensation exclusivity. Rather, his claims are the garden-variety types of termination claims courts treat as barred by the WCA. Without even having to delve into the substantive meritless nature of Plaintiff's IIED allegations then, the Court can easily and should conclude that Menzies is entitled to summary judgment of Plaintiff's Fourth Cause of Action.

9 | IV. CONCLUSION

10 For all the foregoing reasons, Menzies requests the Court enter complete summary judgment in 11 its favor on all causes of action in Plaintiff's Complaint, or in the alternative, partial summary judgment.
